Early watchmakers, patronising the vegetshie kingdom, adopted the forms of fruits and flowers. In the Bernal collection (a rare madley of artistic odds and ends) there was a Nurembut this, we suspect, must be a mistake for fiftyberg watch in the shape of a pear, in parcel gilt four hundreds of an inch-a very different affair silver. Another, shaped like a melon, was made. Aimold prescuted to George the Third an ex-by a Frenchman. It is only one inch and a quarter in diameter, and has a key in form of a quarter in diameter, and has a key in form of a author-lenf. A whole class of watches were for generations known as Nuremberg eggs. One, supposed to have belonged to our wise-foolish Janies the First, is of a flattish egg-shape, the outer case plain, the inner claborately engraved; the face sas a calendar, and wherewithal for showing the moon's age. - Another, existing in a private collection, is an egg out out of a jacinth, with the dial-face visible through the transparent jewel—a very beautiful mode of indulging in these crotchets. In the Dover Museum is double-cased egg-watch with two movable dials, one for showing the hours of the day in the usual fashion, and the other for the names and days of the month; there are also means for die. denoting the day of the week and the position of the sun in the goding; and—an oddity indeed -the hands go the reverse way from those in ordinary watches, or from right to left, as if the artist's notion of time took a backward direction. In Hollar's set of four engravings of the Four casons, a lady is represented in the character of Summer, with an egg-watch suspended from to

Surely the most dismal of all watches must have been those shaped in the form of a skull or-death's head, intended doubtless as memen toes of the fleetness of time and the brevity of man's existence. Many examples of this class are contained in various public and private colicotions. One of these, small in size, is of silver. and has a ring at the top to enspend it from the girdle; the lower jaw of the skull opens, and there displays the dail-face. Another of the doloful family, made in the seventeenth century, opens at the lower jaw to show what's tt 1033 Hongkong, 30th April, 1867. o'clock, and has inscriptions ("Incertite hora," " A sterna respice") on the outside. But the most celebrated death's head watch, once belonging to Mary Queen of Scots, was that which the royal lady gave to Mary Senton, her maid of bonour, and which afterwards came into the possession of Sir Thomas Dick Lander. It is of silver gilt. The forehead of the skull bears the symbols of death, the scythe, and the hourthings, and at the top of the head are scenes of had immediately. For terms, apply to the Garden of Eden and the Orneifition. The watch is opened by reversing the skell, placing the upper part of it in the hollow of the hand. and lifting the jaw by a hinge, this part being enriched by engraved representations of the Holy Family, angels, and shophords with their flocks. Some of the old watchmakers were remarkably the heavenly bodies in a way which modern of the Hon. F. FORTH, Esq., a most desirable watches seldom aspire to. There is an oval FAMILY RESIDENCE, having an extensive silver watch by Dupont, with index hands to show the hour of the day, the day of the week, the day of the month, and the age of the moon, while there are other arrangements for denoting something about the constellations; and inside Dining Room of the same size, two Purlours, a the cover are a sun-dial and a compass. Baptiste Duboule, of Geneva, made a large On the Second Floor t watch which denotes the four parts of the day, the hour of the day, the day of the week, the Dressing room. day of the month, the name of the month. the sign of the zodias, the age of the moon, the phase of the moon, and the four seasons of the year; far too complex, probably, to be really reliable as an astronomical guide, seeing that the smallest disarrangement in any little wheel would throw sun, moon, and earth into awful catastrophe. More practicable was a watch made by a Polish peasant, Kuhaiesky, at Warsaw, which denoted the time at different places under different longitudes-a contrivance which we have seen imitated in a modern English watch. One of these mechanical conundrams was found among the loot of, the Emperor of China's summer palace at Pekin, when captured by the English, it was of the time of Louis the Sixteenth, and is supposed to neve been presented to the Son of the Sun and Moon by that sovereign; it was a telescope enriched with pearls and enamels: but when we are told that "the object glass is formed of a watch set with pearls," we confess to being

large to be carried as a pocket watch.

The attempts to produce sounds of various kinds in a watch have been numerous. The celebrated French maker, Breguet, was favious for repeating watches of this kind; and the sovereigns of Europe were ready enough to give him two or three hundred guiness for one. Of course alarums are more simple, seeing that the mechanism is required merely to ring a bell at some definite and pre-arranged hour in advance. Charles the First kept an alarum watch at his bedside at night; the outer case enclosed two silver bells which struck the hours and quarters. M. Rangouet, a French maker, about a century ago, is credited with the construction of a musical watch, of the common pooket size, H. Gough Street, at preswhich played duets, and the works of which were Messrs. MARGESSON & Co. so nicely adjusted that the musical portion and the time-measuring portion did not interfere with each other. This is far surpassed by a watch, about the size of an egg, constructed by a Russian peasant in the time of the Empress Catherine the Second, and now preserved in the Academy of Sciences at St. Petersburg. This elaborate work water frontage. Apply to P. & A. C. forms a chant. Inside is a representation of the tomb of Christ, with Roman sentinels on guard. On pressing a spring, a stone rolls away from the tomb, the sentinels fall down, angles ap- THE Property known as "Almack Place," pear, holy women enter the sepulchre, and sing I having a frontage of Eighty-three feet on the same chant which is still song in the Russo. The natives believed that the missionaries ouckoo clocks were inhabited by a spirit, and regarded them accordingly with reverential awe. One of them, holder than the rest, picked one of the clocks to well suitable for an Office. For particuling... pieces to have a peep at the spirit. Of course lars, apply to he could not put it together again; and the fame found that they also were powerless in the matter. There is some mention made of watches which actually talked, emitting articulate sounds in the form of words; but this we deem doubtful. From the period when men began to wear pocket clocks, as they were at first called, but mechanism much smaller than a pocket watch watches or time-watchers, as they were after—as the Swiss Nightingale at the last Great wards designated, all sorts of fanciful vagaries Exhibition testified.
